HOME GROWING

The Growing Area

The ideal growing area in the home is a bright window, free from drafts, where your plants receive direct sunlight both morning and afternoon. In window collections, plants need protection only against the burning midday sun in summer. In winter, give all the light possible to your orchid plants. (The light intensity should be between 1500 and 2000 foot candles, depending upon the season of the year and the latitude.) With extra large windows or especially intense sunlight, the additional light may be adjusted by moving the plants 18 to 36 inches away from the window. Of course, glasshouse growing will require shading to reduce light intensity.

Plants in the home require a greater light intensity because they receive light from only one direction, while in a glasshouse, they receive light from all sides. A plant shipped in bud should be placed in a bright window until 3 days after the blooms open, to allow them to "harden" and be long-lasting. In areas with extremely cold, freezing nights, the plants should be temporarily moved back from the window to provide a protective air space against the deepfreeze of the windowpane.

Cymbidiums are treated differently in areas of moderate climate such as the coastal areas of California, Oregon, and Washington, where they thrive outdoors if there is no severe freezing weather or extended periods of high night temperatures. Cymbidiums are semi-terrestrials (semi-earth-rooted) and should be potted in a mix 2/5 bark or redwood sawdust, 2/5 horticultural peat moss and 1/5 sand—or our Supersoil. Cymbidiums should be grown in a sheltered spot protected from severe drying winds. In most other areas, the Cymbidium is planted outdoors in a sheltered spot in the garden with almost full sun until the severe winter weather comes and it is moved indoors to the brightest and coolest spot in the house.

Providing Additional Humidity

All potted orchid plants in the growing area may be set on decorative pebbles in a water-filled tray, saucer, or other container, as shown in the photograph on the next page. The evaporation of water in the pebbles provides humidity. Pebbles not only increase the humidity, but make the growing area more attractive, as well as facilitating drainage.

Temperature Requirements

Orchids are not at all the delicate plants most people think they are. They will generally adapt readily to conditions offered by any modern home. For growing purposes we usually group orchids into three temperature classes:

The Medium class is represented by cattleyas, epidendrums, miltonias, oncidiums, mottled leaf cypripediums, and a few others. The ideal minimum temperature is 60° nights and high 70°s during the days. An occasional deviation will have no harmful effect. This group will do very well with the air, temperature, and light facilities found in the modern home.

The Cool class includes cymbidiums, plain leaf cypripediums, odontoglossums and others, and should be grown in 3° to 5° cooler than the Medium Class.

The Warm class is represented by phalaenopsis, vandas, and dendrobiums. These plants should be grown 5° warmer than those in the Medium class.

Lighting Requirements

Some home orchid growers are unable to give their plants enough light, due to short day lengths or poorly situated windows. In these cases the orchids are given supplementary artificial lighting—or even grown entirely by artificial light. (For information on this see recent issues of the American Orchid Society Bulletin.)

On the other hand, too long a day length can prevent an orchid's blooming. Many cattleyas will not develop flowers if kept in continuous light for over 14 hours a day. If kept in a room that has intense lighting after dark, it may be necessary to shade the orchid plants from the artificial light. Here at "Acres of Orchids" we delay flowering to time a crop for the holidays by using supplementary artificial light at night. Light intensity or duration has no effect on orchid plants in bloom.

When To Water

In watering all types, just pour an abundance of water into the top of the pot. Much will seem to drain through the hole in the bottom, but more is retained by the porous absorbent potting mixture than you would think. In determining when to water, feel the growing medium about the base of the plant with the tips of your fingers. Not just the surface, which of course dries out first—stick your fingers into it. If it feels dry and harsh, it needs water.

All orchids should have a thorough leaching or dunking for 15 minutes, three times a year. Orchids potted in bark require more frequent waterings than those in most other potting media, just as plants in clay pots require more frequent watering than those in plastic pots.

Orchids may be grouped into 4 categories as far as moisture requirements are concerned:

1. Thorough drying between waterings. Cattleyas, laeliocattleyas, brassolaeliocattleyas, oncidiums, miltonias, and odontoglossums are epiphytes or "air rooted" orchids, with built-in "water tanks" or pseudobulbs. They like a certain amount of drying out between waterings, with moist air circulating about their epiphytic roots. Water every 5 days or so. In the heat of mid-summer, water may be needed every 3 or 4 days. In the short, cool days of winter, stretch the time between waterings to 10 or even 14 days. This group you can treat with studied neglect—if you must err in watering, err on the dry side.

2. Frequent waterings. Phalaenopsis and vandas, while also epiphytic, are monopodial and do not have built-in tanks for water storage. They require about the same watering as any ordinary house plant, but more frequent waterings than orchids with pseudobulbs. Water enough to keep the potting material damp at all times, but not dripping.

3. Wet growers. Cypripediums, yet another type as far as watering requirements are concerned, are semi-terrestrials or terrestrials (meaning "earth-rooted"). Unlike the preceding groups, they do not mind wet "feet." They like an abundance of moisture and the bottoms of the pots may stand in water for some time after watering.

4. Garden type watering. Cymbidiums also like an abundance of moisture—but with good drainage and plentiful root aeration.

Feed Frequently But Lightly

For feeding orchid plants, use any soluble orchid plant food such as our instant Wonder-Lizer. Apply as directed once or twice a month, adding the plant food to the water for regular waterings. All orchids potted in bark need to be fertilized.

Repotting Your Orchids

When the plant outgrows the pot extending over the edge, usually about every 2 years, it is time to repot. Today most plants are potted in Wonder-Bark (fir bark.) You can repot by removing the plant from the old pot, cutting off the withered back-bulbs, and potting like any other house plant. For detailed instructions ask for our free "Potting Instructions" folder.

Cultural Service

Orchids are free from plant pests and almost never need spraying. If you think that yours may be affected, write to us, describing the symptoms and your present care. Should any tiny soil flies or lice appear, have no concern, they will soon vanish. To hasten their departure if they annoy you (they do no harm), spray with Malathion at the usual prescribed strength. Use Malathion if any insect attacks the plant—but usually wiping with a warm soapy wet cloth is sufficient if you have but a few plants in the house. We are glad to give cultural information free of charge at any time. With each orchid plant order from this catalogue we include our brochure, "Orchids at Home!" giving all the information you should need to grow your orchids. We will gladly send this brochure upon request to you or to your interested friends. For more detailed information on orchid care or general history, we recommend the books listed under Supplies.

Above All, Enjoy Your Orchids While In Flower at Home

As soon as your orchid blooms have opened and hardened, move the plant to the location in your home or office that displays its full beauty to best advantage. While in flower, leave the pebbles in the growing area and cover the pot with an attractive cover or expandable bamboo sleeve such as those listed under Supplies. This is your big moment—make the most of it! When the blooms fade, cut back the flower stem itself without cutting the leaves or bulbs and return the plant to the best suited growing area to help your plant "grow on" for future blooms.

Any order of $50.00 or less may be shipped POSTAGE FREE out of the blooming season if you specify either DO-IT-YOURSELF or OUT-OF-POT (see page 27.) This is quite a saving on your plant purchases. Remember to add 49c per plant to the prices listed below for DO-IT-YOURSELF orders. For gift plants and multiple plant offers, see page 3.

Prices shown opposite the pot size indicate price range, as $7.50—$35.00, with intermediate priced plants available in the following amounts: $7.50, $8.50, $10.00, $12.00, $15.00, $18.00, $20.00, and in multiples of $5.00 thereafter.

CYPRIPEDIUMS

"THE LADY SLIPPER ORCHID" may be called the "Orchid of the Sophisticate," for truly those uninitiated to orchids cannot imagine what delight the Cypripedium (Paphiopedilum) will bring them as they come to perceive the unique beauty of these unusual flowers. Cypripediums are most attractive orchid plants for the home and their long lasting flowers make them ideal for home growing. Their flowering habit of peaking in early winter makes them desirable for Christmas decorations in the home and for Christmas gifts. These are the large, free-flowering hybrids desired by the commercial grower as well as the private individual. The price range indicates the size and quality of the plants. Intermediate plant prices within the ranges given are: $8.50, $10.00, $12.00, $15.00, $18.00, $20.00, and multiples of $5.00 thereafter.

Mainly, CYPRIPEDIUMS fall into two classes; the mottled leaf type thrives on 60° to 68° nights and the cool class likes 55° to 60°. A few hybrids fall in between—into the MEDIUM range, temperature 59° to 62°. (It must be noted, however, that many of these plants are hybrids with mixed parentage and the designation is merely an INDICATOR.) The cool type may be grown in warm climates IF the fancier has provided misting or some sort of evaporative cooling.

MILTONIAS

THE PANSY ORCHID. These hybrid Miltonias are large free-flowering striking types. They adapt themselves well to home growing and the flowers keep for a month or more on the plant, although they do not last after cutting. The forthright bright impression expressed by these showy blossoms gracefully held on arching stems is making them a favorite of orchid fanciers. Miltonias like the Medium temperatures of Cattleyas, possibly 1 or 2 degrees less. Prices are for plants in pot in spike f.o.b. South San Francisco if purchased in the Spring. Out of the flowering season we suggest buying Out-Of-Pot or Do-It-Yourself (see Page 27).

CYMBIDIUMS

CYMBIDIUMS

Unsurpassed hybrids, many of which are triploids, hybridized for exceptionally large, well-shaped flowers and for prolific characteristics. For the uninitiated, these are semi-terrestrial orchids that have reached the height of popularity in recent years. Modern hybridizing has transformed Cymbidiums into a sensationally beautiful type of long-lasting spray of large colorful flowers. They may be grown outdoors in frost-free areas (refer to home growing instructions for this genus on pages 4 and 5). They are potted in a medium like our SUPERSOIL or a mixture of WONDERBARK and SUPERSOIL. Because of the large size and the heavier weight of the potting mix, Cymbidiums not in spike are shipped bare root, polyethylene protected, POSTPAID. During the flowering season—Winter and Spring—it is delightful to order a Cymbidium in spike—which must be shipped in pot Express COLLECT.

BIGENERICS AND UNUSUALS

We particularly draw your attention to these intergeneric crosses as well as to the novel crosses that bring together the influences of diverse areas into progeny entirely new to the world. The thrill of seeing the results of bigeneric crosses, many of which have been made for the first time, can be obtained from this listing. Seldom but in orchids are bigeneric crosses made with success. These are the foundation stock for beginning new lines, new trends in orchids. They could be the "fore-runner" parent stock of a unique and striking collection.

The DO-IT-YOURSELF and OUT-OF-POT offers apply to these plants when ordered out of season, without buds (see page 27). Cool, Medium, or Warm, indicates the temperature classification of each plant, as explained on page 4.

WONDER LINE PRODUCTS

WONDER-LIZER, the water-soluble plant food developed at "Acres of Orchids," has everything for orchids and all house plants everywhere. So handy and so easy to use, WONDER-LIZER has a bright pink color to indicate the correct strength and acts as a helpful guide when you use a proportioner (page 26).

WONDER-LIZER contains phosphates, extremely dear components for plant foods; these, combined with easily absorbed iron chelate and other important ingredients, give WONDER-LIZER a unique and ideal food balance. Also economical to use, the recommended strength is just one level teaspoonful of WONDER-LIZER to one gallon of water in every third watering for light-feeding Cattleyas; every other watering for heavy feeders.

Inquiries about WONDER-LIZER retailer prices and territorial distributorships welcomed.

WONDERBARK

—Clean—Uniform. WONDERBARK, the ground or chopped and screened bark of abies concolor or white fir, is the potting medium used extensively by both professional and amateur orchidists. Easy and economical for repotting all types of orchids and producing plants that are noticeably stronger and larger. Vigorous root growth, strong plant and flower production, all with less cost, time and effort. The frequency of watering (with which we recommend light feeding of WONDER-LIZER) depends upon the grade of WONDERBARK used and the moisture or humidity of the growing area.

WONDERBARK is available in several sizes or grinds, packaged in two-cu.-ft. sacks, each weighing approximately 45 to 55 lbs. Medium and Coarse grades of WONDERBARK are in 3 sizes of Hobby Sacks—the popular 8 lb. GIANT HOBBY SACK, which will pot six 6" pots—the handy 5 lb. HOBBY SACK, sufficient for four 6" pots—and the 1 lb. JR. HOBBY SACK for 1 pot. Our illustrated "Potting Instructions" folder is available upon request. Note: Larger orders for distant shipment—we recommend ordering at least 2 two-cu.-ft. sacks, since truck rates are based on a 100 lb. minimum.
